Lee Co.

Pennington, Thompson, Hughes

CA-Divorce

Vicus

To the Honorable H. A. W. Skeen, Judge of the circuit court for Lee County, Virginia:

Humbly complaining, your oratrix, S. C. Russell, respectfully represents that on the _____ day of _____ she was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to one C. D. Russell, in Lee County, Virginia; that a short time afterwards she and her said husband removed to the State of Missouri, where they resided together happily as man and wife for some years, but after a time her said husband began to neglect her and her family of small children, and to associate with drunkards and gamblers, until finally he became almost an habitual drunkard wholly neglecting to provide for his family; that she notified her father who lived in Lee County, Virginia, of the state of affairs, and her father sent her the means with which to return to his home in Virginia, which she accordingly did; that shortly afterwards, her said husband also returned to Lee County, Virginia, and made to her fair promises that he would henceforth lead a temperate life and devote himself and his energies to the proper support of himself and family. So for some years after their said return to Virginia, as aforeaaid, she and her said husband lived together as man and wife in comparative peace and happiness, but after some years her said husband again took to drink, and in a short time became an habitual drunkard, and also became very abusive and ill-tempered to your oratrix, and on more than one occasion struch her and otherwise abuseed and maltreated her, and one more than one occasion threatened her life, flourishing his pistol over and about her. Finally, after her said husband had drunk up and run through with all his property, he went to Wise County, Virginia, were he sucured employment with the Virginia Coal & Iron Company in connection with their lumber operations. While he was thus employed your oratrix was informed that he took up with and was living in adultery with one Ellen Pennington, a common prostitute. This was in the spring of the years 19 03. About the month of May of that year, on account of his interperate and immoral habits and conduct, as she was informed, he was discharged from his employment with said Company. At any rate about that time he returned to her home in Lee County, Virginia, where she was living with her father and mother, and wanted to resume the marriage relation, but ^{your oratrix} ~~respondent~~ believing the reports of his immoral acts to be true, refused to live with him. Your oratrix had not lived with him as his wife for months before this time because he had voluntarily deserted her, and remained away in Wise county and probably at other places. Another reason why your oratrix refused to live with the said Russell was that she feared he would at some time become intoxicated and while in that condition do her or some member of her family great bodily hurt, probably take her or their lives. Shortly after her refusal to further live with her husband as his wife as aforesaid, he left the State of Virginia, and moved to the State of Washington, where he lived for some time, and afterwards removed from thence to Wyoming where he now lives. Your oratrix is informed, however, that her said husband contemplates returning to Virginia soon, and she fears if he does so he will undertake to give trouble.

Your oratrix alleges that the said C. D. Russell, in Wise County, Virginia, during the months of February, March, April, May, at a place called Mud Lick, and at the house occupied by John P. Hughes and probably at other places in that vicinity was guilty of acts of Adultery with the said Ellen Pennington, a common prostitute; that since learning of these acts on the part of her said husband she has not cohabited with him or in any way condoned his said acts; that she is not and has been for some ten years a resident of and domiciled within the County of Lee and State of Virginia; and that she and her said husband last cohabited together and lived together as man and wife in Lee County, Virginia, about three years ago.

The premises considered, the prayer of your oratrix is that said C. D. Russell be made party defendant to this bill, that order of publication be made against him, and that she be granted an absolute divorce from her said husband. She does not ask for alimony as her said husband has no property so far as she knows.
